PROMISE MADE: New York City will provide adequate and accessible services to all needy homeless New Yorkers.

PROMISE BROKEN: The Bloomberg administration now plans to close it's only intake center in Manhattan, and require more than 14,000 homeless men seeking shelter to travel long distances to an inadequate facility in Crown Heights.

PROMISE MADE: No New York neighborhood will be required to absorb more than its fair share of City social services facilities.

PROMISE BROKEN: The Bloomberg administration now plans to locate its major homeless male intake center in North Crown Heights – a neighborhood that is already the borough leader in social service beds.

PROMISE MADE: To ease the burden of the new intake center, the City will close the Peter Young Shelter across the street.

PROMISE BROKEN: The Bloomberg Administration is now seeking to reopen Peter Young and expand the facility to over 150 beds.

PROMISE MADE: The City will commit $7 million to building a track and field in the Armory for the Central Brooklyn community.

PROMISE BROKEN: The Bloomberg Administration has cancelled the track and field – apparently only Manhattan and Park Slope deserve these facilities.
